Rationale of the Programme

Reforms in labour laws are a continuous process aimed at modernising and rationalising the legislative framework in line with India's evolving economic and industrial environment. To address long-standing challenges of complexity, multiplicity, and outdated provisions, the Government of India has consolidated 29 existing labour laws into four comprehensive Labour Codes.

This codification seeks to enhance ease of doing business, promote employment generation, and ensure safety, health, social security, and wage protection for workers across sectors.

The key drivers behind these reforms include:

- Simplification of compliance: Multiple overlapping labour laws created significant compliance burdens for organisations.
- Streamlining enforcement: The presence of multiple authorities under different labour laws led to administrative complexity and enforcement challenges.
- Modernisation of labour legislation: Many labour laws were framed in the pre-Independence era and required alignment with present-day economic realities, technological advancements, and emerging forms of employment.

Programme Objectives:

By the end of this two-day Management Development Programme, participants will be able to:

1. Develop a clear understanding of the Four Labour Codes and their implications for wages, industrial relations, social security, and workplace safety.

2. Interpret statutory compliance requirements effectively, ensuring adherence to legal provisions and minimising organisational risk.
3. Align HR policies, payroll structures, and operational practices with the new labour law framework.
4. Design practical implementation strategies for a smooth transition from existing labour laws to the new Labour Codes.
5. Enhance organisational preparedness to promote employee welfare, industrial harmony, and a compliant, future-ready workforce.

Brief Need for the Programme:

- To simplify and clarify labour law compliance arising from the consolidation of 29 labour laws into four Labour Codes.
- To provide organisations with practical guidance on HR policy alignment, payroll structuring, and statutory compliance.

- To address workforce inclusivity by covering permanent, contractual, gig, platform, and informal sector employees.
